THE ATLANTIC MONTHLY RECENTLY
published an article on this dreadin maisely, which attracted considerable attention, not only from the high character of the periodical in which it appeares, but likewise from the nature of the remedies indicated. Two instances are given where the patients seemed in the last stages, and yet, by a mode of treatment at once simple, natural and of easy application, the most unlocked for and happy results followed. In so delicate a matter where health and life are at stake—we do not feel warranted in recommending remedies upon unprofessional dicta; and do not consider ounselves as deviating from sound principles when we call attention to Doctors Tichnesof & Gabbert, who come recommended to this community with high testimonials of professional skill, and a record of unprecedented success in the speciality to which they have devoted thamselves. Those gentlemen have received certificates—the originals of which are accessible to interested parties—demonstrating, not only their high character, conscientionsness and capacity, but likewise proving the efficacy of their mode of treatment.
